MDCCXCIII.

P R E F A C E.

THE taste for collecting and preserving engraved British Portraits, seems to have made its progress in proportion as the subject has been treated of. The exertions of our own Artists, in the infancy of engraving upon copper, left us but little to fear from the rivalry of others under an uninterrupted encouragement; but, with the termination of the reign of Charles the First, the annihilation of this Art seemed to be threatened, and the works of the best masters may be said to have been then consigned to a casual fate.

Before the cabinet of the Earl of Oxford, we hear of none which deserves distinction; for though the Art, from the Restoration even to the beginning of the present reign, may be fixed at its meridian in that of Charles the Second, there occur but few persons who collected Portraits, and those only as a secondary branch of vertú. Among these principally rank Mr. Evelyn, Mr. Ashmole, and Mr. Pepys.

The partiality of the Nobleman above mentioned, and the late Duchess Dowager of Portland, for the Art of Engraving, by their immediate patronage of the indefatigable Mr. George Vertue, did not produce that competition by which it might be revived, but rather a respectful remembrance of, than the Art itself.

The descriptive Catalogue of the Select Collection of Mr. John Nickolls, a Quaker, by Mr. Joseph Ames in 1748, and the elegant Treatises of the Hon. Horace Walpole, diffused the passion for collecting ancient Portraits so much that few of the earlier works were left in circulation for future collectors.

But, upon the appearance of the Biographical History of England by the Rev. Mr. James Granger, to such a height of enthusiasm did it arrive, that old legends and chronicles, and curious pieces in the black letter, were considered, either by the buyer or the seller, of little value compared with the pictures they contained. Keepers of stalls, and brokers, became enlightened by the general pursuit after old beads, and withheld their Memoirs, Trials, and even Almanacks, till they had obtained an exorbitant demand for their attractive frontispieces.

The utility of a well-chosen collection of engraved Portraits is manifest, if we consider how much Literature has been extended, particularly in History general and local, Biography, Genealogies, Genealogies, Peerages, &c. and which might still be more essentially aided by a stricter attention to the inscriptions upon prints.

It is to the "Biographical History" we are indebted for any sort of system or discrimination. From thence I have availed myself of many useful hints; and although, in the arrangement of the following Catalogue, I have thought it necessary to abandon the plan of that book, I am irresistibly impelled to pay my tribute to the memory of the worthy Author, by subscribing to it my approbation, as a work at once elegant in design and spirited in execution, so far as respects a biographical work:—as a Catalogue of Prints, that design is also a means of defeating its object, the variety of places and capacities in which the prints are disposed rendering its access tedious and inconvenient.

If, therefore, the objects principally required are a just discrimination of the prints, and a vehicle to Biography, upon a plan compact and ready in its access, the Author hopes this desideratum will appear to be amply supplied in the following copious Catalogue, and that it will have the suffrage of the English Antiquary and Historian, no less than of the Artist and Connoisseur.

With respect to modes of arrangement, as every Gentleman collects not to the same extent, so, in classing, he will exercise his own discretion. I have, for the reasons already stated, availed myself of the general opinion, by placing collectively, all the prints of persons who have flourished at a distance of time, and in different capacities, according to the latest accounts of them, disregarding the conformity of dresses, a circumstance incompatible with a Collection of Portraits classed upon an historical principle.

Presuming, then, upon the propriety of this method, I have observed, as a necessary consequence, in the recital of the titles or designations of the articles of persons of eminence, to state the highest rank which they at any time enjoyed, although such title or rank should not be expressed in the inscription of any of their prints. In like manner, the Female Sex, whose portraits have been drawn when single persons, when married are described by their last name.

Were I to enumerate the difficulties which have presented themselves in the course of this undertaking, from the want of the necessary information which should be conveyed by inscriptions on prints, it would swell this article beyond due limits. Engravers, in the earliest state of the Art, seem to have considered, that the great end being to transmit to posterity as well a tribute to merit as the similitude of the person, the words upon the plate should unite with the portrait, by a recital of the particulars by which the person was distinguished. Upon its introduction into England, the family of Pais and their contemporaries pursued this idea, by inscribing their Prints in the Latin as well as the English language, that the information might be universal. Hollar, in those Prints which he engraved after Vandyck, did the same; but, unfortunately, with him also began the practice complained of.

The mezzotintos by Smith, Becket, Browne, &c. in the reign of Charles the Second, and their followers down to the late reign, particularly those of the Female Sex, were inscribed in a way so vague as if not intended to survive the day of their publication. The same practice is implicitly observed at present. By these means, many persons not connected with the peerage or baronetage, are now utterly unknown*.

In posthumous Prints this defect may have arisen from the inattention of the Painter. Upon a very superficial view of the Column of Painters in the following Catalogue, it is observable how rarely occur the dates of the paintings, or the ages of the persons. Hence arise all the misnomers of copies from ancient pictures, which have been imposed upon us.

When I complain of imperfect inscriptions, I wish not to be understood to speak universally, those of the Nobility being in general sufficiently copious, but of such as bear the scanty information of a surname only. Consistently with this practice we frequently see a Portrait engraved at an unlimited expence, with intention, no doubt, to perpetuate the memory of a friend or relation:—is it not to be lamented that the name, which should consecrate the work to posterity, is thus, either by accident or design, involved in obscurity?

The respect I entertain for the Artists of the present day, as ranking pre-eminently, induces me to hope they will view this hint with the same candour with which it is offered: my wish being only to give their works their full effect, by relieving posterity, as well as their present admirers, from those difficulties which I have experienced.

Without the very liberal aid of several Gentlemen, my endeavours to give a just description of the Portraits of this kingdom to the present time must have been insufficient; and it is but justice to render them my tribute of thanks.

To Sir William Musgrave, Bart. I am particularly indebted, for the very great assistance which he has long suffered me to derive from his numerous and well arranged-collection, for the whole plan of this work, with the general enumeration of the prints, and the short biographical notices down to the late reign—given me, in the most liberal manner, to use at my discretion.

* It is incumbent on me to make my acknowledgements to those numerous persons of distinction who have honoured me with their communications respecting the Portraits of their friends under ambiguous circumstances, with equal condescension and liberality.

To

To James Bindley, Esq. Commissioner of the Stamp Duties, I am under the highest obligation for notices of many curious ancient Portraits, several of which were unknown, as well as of others of the present day never published, and most of the descriptions in the lines affixed to the names of the Artists:—to this I may add, the frequent opportunities he has afforded me of comparing my manuscripts with his valuable collection.

My thanks are also due to several other Gentlemen for much information; but more particularly to the Rev. Mr. Brand, Chaplain to the Duke of Northumberland, to Anthony Storer, and Edmund Turnor, Esqrs.

Entreating the Critical Reader, while accompanying me through this long and intricate walk, a great part whereof hath not heretofore been trodden, to keep in view the lenient adage “humanum est errare,” and assuring him that the most scrupulous regard hath been paid to the “fair form of truth,” by avoiding, as much as possible, to treat those things as genuine which are of a contrary nature,—I beg leave to submit my labours, the result of close attention for several years in this pleasing branch of vertù, to his candour, and the judgment of the experienced Collector.

* It seems now pretty clear that this print is really the portrait of Bishop Horne, as appears from the figure of the person, and the arms, "Three Bugle Horns." Edmund Turnor, Esq. of Sackville-street, who did me the honour of communicating to me this article, purchased at a sale a portrait of a Bishop, with the arms of the See of Winchester impaled with B. a cross, ar. between four birds heads erased of the 2d. in the centre of the cross a cing-foil gules; which were the arms granted to Bishop Gardiner. Mr. T. afterwards compared it with an undoubted portrait of that bishop in the lodge of Trinity-Hall in Cambridge (whereof Gardiner was some time master), and found it to be the same countenance exactly, but in better preservation.

Anonymous portrait of a man about this period, in an oval, on the base of a folio print. The arms are said to be those of the family of Starkey. The print, which is on vellum, seems to have been designed as a frontispiece, but probably was never published. It is in the possession of A. Storer, Esq. The following verses are in two compartments:

Having liv'd twenty yeares, I musing found,
Fortie yeares more would halfe in sleepe bee drown'd;
Which to prevent, each day till past midnight,
My pen was going, and my lampe was light.

	The oval in the same print is the portrait of NA- THANIEL PARKER of Gray's Inn.

* I never saw the print of this John Cole, which is dated in MS. 1673, except in Sir William Musgrave's collection. It evidently belongs to a book, though there is no account of this person, as an author, in any of the catalogues of our public libraries.

† It is very improbable that this print of Cowley, from its youthful appearance, could be done from a painting which he sat for to Mrs. Beale; he being in the latter period of his life when she was but little known as a paintress.

ALPHABETICALLY ARRANGED

A D V E R T I S E M E N T.

THE variety of sentiments and methods respecting an arrangement of the portraits of such foreigners as are admitted into the English Series, renders it a difficult task to adopt a plan suitable to general practice. It was the author's intention to have ranged them into classes conformable to the ENGLISH CATALOGUE; but notwithstanding the great additions which will be found previous to the Revolution (and which must not even now be understood as a complete account of all foreigners who claim a place therein), they are still deficient to form such a classification. He has, therefore, pursued a middle path, by throwing them into one general alphabet.

It not being deemed necessary to insert every print of each person, when numerous, they are selected as appearing either to have been engraved after paintings done in England, or otherwise applying nearest to the time of their residence here.

N. B. The Princes are to be found according to the names of their country, by the summit of their titles.
